Rugged • Time-Tested • Weather-Tested

Metal roofs can be costly to replace once the metal begins to deteriorate and leak. One cost-effective solution is a PVC metal retrofit system.

Mule-Hide Products PVC Membrane can be installed over existing standing seam metal roofing, with approved insulation, to offer long-lasting protection while increasing the energy efficiency of the building.

Features & Benefits

- Increased building comfort through added insulating value of lightweight flute filler, new insulation and high-reflective membrane
- Strong fastening methods to structural purlins
- Superior watertight heat-welded seams

Installing a PVC Metal Retrofit System

1. Existing standing seam metal roof.
2. Flute fill insulation. Fills in the space between the standing seams of the metal roof panels, either with Poly ISO or EPS.
3. Approved insulation to create a flat surface for the membrane and increase the "R" value.
4. PVC membrane can be mechanically attached (using fasteners and plates), induction-welded or fully-adhered (using Low-VOC PVC Bonding Adhesive or AeroWeb PVC Low-VOC Aerosol Contact Adhesive).
5. PVC membrane is heat-welded together using robotic hot air welder.
